Feature of the Month: Webinars

If you want ideas to teach about the eclipse in your classroom, watch our webinar "Teaching Resources for the April 8 Total Solar Eclipse."

Find this and past webinars for great insights on teacher workforce, success skills your students will need in the workplace, and much more!

Designing Active Learning Performance Tasks

What do active learning performance tasks look like?

In this video, SREB instructional coach, Marty Sugerik, walks viewers through the process of designing active learning performance tasks, using applied math in CTE as an example.

This video goes with our active learning flow chart, our sample active learning lesson and our step-by-step blog post on moving towards active learning. You can find both of these resources below!

SREB at ACTE's National Work-Based Learning Conference

SREB's an Exhibitor at the 2024 ACTE National Work-
Based Learning Conference

Come meet us, and see how we can help you!

Where:
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

When:
May 1-3

Visit our booth to learn more about SREB at ACTE's National Work-Based Learning Conference. Along with learning from any of their 63 concurrent sessions on trending topics in work-based learning, you can attend a pre-conference tour; be inspired by keynote speaker, Kevin Paul Scott; and network with other educators all while gaining great insights to bring back to your school.

We can't wait to see you there.

Resource: A Shift to Active Learning Flowchart and Sample Assignments

The Active Learning Process

We have two resources for you this month, and they go hand-in-hand. In our flowchart, see how you can move to an active form of learning that combines hands-on lessons with critical thinking. Then, check out our sample lessons where you can see a hands-on project and then an upgraded active project for the same standard.

You can also see how to use these resources by reading the accompanying blog post on active learning, which is featured below.
